

Chris Armas

Mr. Armas' career as CIO/CTO and Business Strategy leader spans various business verticals, including healthcare, payments, financial, logistics, telecom, higher education, utilities, software, and non-profit organizations, extends 25 years and reflects a comprehensive experience in all aspects of Information Technology.

As a Senior Redhook Partner, Chris has led multiple transformation initiatives including his two years as Interim CIO for The Sequoia Project (eHealth Exchange, Carequality, and Interoperability Matters), the private/public coalition chartered to advance the implementation of secure, interoperable nationwide health information exchange.

Chris is veteran entrepreneur having founded two successful tech startups and has been CIO/CTO at Lucent Technologies Consumer Products, and at Brinks Global Payments. Chris has served as an executive management and technology strategy advisor for a wide range Global Fortune 500 companies including American Airlines, AT&T, Avaya, Dow Chemical, Credit Suisse First Boston, Toshiba, Philips Electronics, Movistar, Cable and Wireless, Toshiba, and Sabre. He has helped companies transform and improve business by establishing efficient IT organizations integrated with cost-effective, robust, and flexible technology solutions. Chris has led geographically scattered teams of over three hundred internal and outsourced technology professionals and has managed IT organizations supporting work environments of over 15,000 users.